FEDERAL FORUM

Opioid Crisis an Action Item for Pharmacy

The national epidemic of opioid addiction and death is a fast-moving public health crisis and a call to action for pharmacists, U.S. Public Health Service Commander Christopher M. Jones told attendees on Sunday at The ASHP 2016 Federal Forum.

Jones, the keynote speaker, is Director of Science Policy at the Office of the Assistant Secretary for Planning and Evaluation at the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

"This is the most pressing public health issue that's facing the United States," he said. Jones said federal data indicate that the rate of opioid-related deaths quadrupled from 2009 to 2014.

The recent emergence of potent synthetic fentanyl in U.S. communities has become a major problem, Jones said. Federal data show that in 2014, the number of deaths from exposure to synthetic fentanyl exceeded deaths related to the use of prescription fentanyl. He said the unpredictable effects of synthetic fentanyl are driving this deadly phenomenon.

Jones said the opioid epidemic is compounded by a lack of education and training for healthcare providers on how to use opioids appropriately — and when not to use them. There are opportunities, he said, for pharmacists to educate physicians about potential problems with their opioid prescribing.

This past year, the federal government launched the population-focused National Pain Strategy, and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention released guidelines for opioid prescribing and use.

Jones, interviewed after his keynote speech, urged pharmacists outside of the federal government to learn about their institution's pain management portfolio.

Then ask, "What are the opportunities there to improve the provision of evidence-based pain care?" Jones said. "I think pharmacists are particularly good at doing that type of activity."

Jones said the treatment of addiction is a critical component of any comprehensive pain management program. And he said data indicate that pharmacists can play an important role in the medication-assisted treatment of opioid addiction.

Commander Christopher M. Jones, Pharm.D., MPH

ASHP President Lisa M. Gersema, who spoke before Jones, urged attendees to use the ASHP Guidelines on Preventing Diversion of Controlled Substances to help establish and improve opioid management programs. ■

OPENING SESSION

Peyton Manning to Share Insights on Success

The NFL's only five-time Most Valuable Player, Peyton Manning, will share his insights on teamwork, leadership, motivation, and keys to his success when he takes the stage this morning at the Mandalay Bay Events Center to deliver the Opening Session's keynote address.

Afterward, he will answer questions during a moderated Q&A.

The Opening Session will also feature ASHP President Lisa M. Gersema, award presentations, and acknowledgment of an awardee. Overflow seating, with large screens showing the presentations at the Opening Session, will be available on Level 2 in Mandalay Bay Ballrooms EF and GH.

The following awards will be presented:

- ASHP Board of Directors' Donald E. Francke Medal — to Lee C. Vermeulen, lead planner for the 2008 Global Conference on the Future of Hospital Pharmacy and former leader in the International Pharmaceutical Federation
- ASHP Board of Directors' Distinguished Leadership Award — to Mary Ann Klechermes, Vice Chair and Professor in the Department of Pharmacy Practice, Chicago College of Pharmacy at Midwestern University, Downers Grove, Ill.
- CEO Award for Staff Excellence — to Bruce Hawkins, Editorial Director in the Practice Standards Division, ASHP Office of Policy, Planning and Communications

A representative of the recipient of the ASHP Research and Education Foundation 2016 Award for Excellence in Medication Safety will be recognized. This award was presented during a private event on Sunday evening, after presstime. ■
